

Board of Directors Biographies

Juan Arteaga is a partner in the antitrust and white collar & regulatory enforcement groups in Crowell & Moring's New York office. His practice focuses primarily on advising companies, boards of directors and executives on a broad range of civil and criminal antitrust matters, including litigation, merger reviews, government and internal investigations, and counseling regarding various business practices. From 2013 to 2017, Mr. Arteaga was a senior official in the Antitrust Division of the U.S. Justice Dept. Serving as deputy assistant attorney general for civil enforcement, he worked on and oversaw investigations and litigation in various industries, including financial services, aviation, food and beverage, health care, technology, cable, manufactured products, transportation and telecommunications. He also served as chief of staff and senior counsel to the assistant attorney general for the Antitrust Division. Mr. Arteaga earned a bachelor's with honors in history and political science from Boston College, where he elected to Phi Beta Kappa and earned the Archbishop Oscar Romero Scholarship, and earned his law degree with honors from Columbia University Law School, where he served as managing editor of the Law Review and was a Harlan Fiske Stone Scholar. He is admitted to practice in New York and Connecticut, and is a member of the New York City Bar Assn., the American Bar Assn., the Hispanic National Bar Assn., and the Puerto Rican Bar Assn. He has received the New York Legal Aid Society's Outstanding Pro Publico Award in recognition of his pro bono representation of lawful immigrants in removal proceedings. He has received the Her Justice Commitment to Justice Award for his pro bono representation of indigent women in family court proceedings.

Evelyn Chumbow is a survivor of child labor trafficking turned anti-trafficking activist and public speaker. She has focused her life's work on ending modern slavery. Ms. Chumbow was brought to the U.S. from Cameroon at age 9 and forced to cook, clean and care for her trafficker's children. She was never paid for her work, and any hope that she might escape her miserable life was undermined by beatings she received from her trafficker. For seven years, she lived in constant fear, working day and night. Today, Ms. Chumbow works tirelessly to raise awareness and help other survivors. She serves as an adviser to human trafficking nonprofits and has been invited to brief government agencies about human trafficking from a survivor's perspective, including the Dept. of Homeland Security, the FBI and the Dept. of Justice. She was appointed by President Obama to the U.S. Advisory Council on Human Trafficking. Ms. Chumbow fulfilled a lifelong dream in 2015, graduating with a bachelor's in homeland security studies from the University of Maryland University College. She works as a project assistant at the law firm of Baker McKenzie in Washington.

Daniel Elkes is the vice-chair of the board of directors. As a trustee of the Elkes Foundation, he leads the foundation's anti-slavery efforts. He received his Ph.D. in genetics from Harvard University, and also has a Certificate in Public and International Affairs from his undergraduate studies at Princeton University. Dr. Elkes works in the biotechnology industry as the director of pipeline and portfolio planning at Genentech.

Alison Kiehl Friedman is a single mom with a proven record on issues of human trafficking, security and civil rights. After graduating from Stanford, Ms. Friedman joined People For the American Way where she defended voting rights, an independent judiciary, and high quality public education. She went on to work for Congresswoman Jane Harman, managing complex security, infrastructure and transportation challenges surrounding major ports and LAX airport. Ms. Friedman co-founded ASSET, a nonprofit addressing issues of human trafficking in global supply chains, where she helped author the California Transparency in Supply Chains law, which served as a model for international landmark legislation. Her expertise in the anti-slavery field led Ms. Friedman to be recruited by the State Department at the beginning of the Obama administration, where she served as deputy director in the Office to Monitor and Combat Trafficking in Persons. In that role, she managed more than 50 million dollars in federal grants and U.S. interagency processes to combat human trafficking. Ms. Friedman was instrumental in launching slaveryfootprint.com, crafting the Executive Order that ensured taxpayer dollars didn't further incentivize exploitation, and front-line diplomacy with critical allies to promote freedom around the world. She has received numerous awards for her work, including her contribution to successful resolution of a hostage crisis in Pakistan. Ms. Friedman lives in Virginia with her daughter, Olivia.

Robert Gould is the founder and President/CEO of One Degree Strategies, a consultancy dedicated to encouraging decision makers to adopt policies and create programs that encourage people to make better choices for their health, well-being and the environment. Dr. Gould has been at the forefront of health and social change strategy as an innovator and as a leader. In a career progression including research director, health practice leader and managing director of Porter Novelli's founding office in Washington, Dr. Gould pioneered research-driven and innovative approaches to health communication, including nutrition education (the Food Guide Pyramid), youth tobacco use prevention (the 'truth' campaign) working in close partnership with government and non-profit leaders, including the Centers for Disease Control, American Cancer Society, American Heart Association, National Cancer Institute, National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute and many others. More recently, Dr. Gould has served as Managing Director of Brodeur Partners Washington office and senior strategist for Shift Positive, a specialty group dedicated to supporting foundations, non-profits and progressive commercial organizations on health issues and climate change. His clients included the National Science Foundation, the American Association for the Advancement of Science and the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation. Dr. Gould's academic training includes a BA from Bucknell University and a master's and doctorate in experimental social psychology from the University of Maryland.

Gregory Haile is the chair of the board of directors. He is the president of Broward College in Ft. Lauderdale, Florida. He was educated at the Columbia University School of Law, where he was a Harlan Fiske Stone Scholar and served as Editor-In-Chief of the National Black Law Journal; and Arizona State University, where he graduated magna cum laude and was selected as the most outstanding undergraduate in his college. Mr. Haile joined Broward College in 2011 after working at several law firms including, most recently, Berger Singerman. As general counsel and vice president for public policy and government affairs at Broward, he oversaw broad-ranging legal issues relating to tax, immigration, employment, labor, copyright, real estate, construction and tenure. Further, he oversaw all local, statewide and federal government affairs, including advocating before local, state and congressional leaders to enhance their understanding of higher education issues. Mr. Haile spends significant time serving the community-at-large. Since being recognized in 2007 by Gold Coast Magazine as a prominent South Floridian, he has been recognized with nearly two dozen awards for his influence and commitment to the community.

Sarah Degnan Kambou is president of the International Center for Research on Women (ICRW), a global research institute that focuses on realizing women's empowerment and gender equality to alleviate poverty worldwide. Dr. Kambou's expertise centers on sexual and reproductive health, HIV and AIDS, and adolescent health and livelihoods. She has worked for more than 30 years in Asia, Eastern Europe, and sub-Saharan Africa, including nearly 13 years at ICRW. In December of 2012, President Barack Obama appointed Dr. Kambou to the President's Global Development Council, where she advises him and key administration leaders on effective practices and policies for U.S. foreign assistance. In 2010, Dr. Kambou was honored with Boston University's School of Public Health's Distinguished Alumni Award for her contributions to the field of public health. She is also a recipient of the Perdita Huston Human Rights Award, conferred in 2013 by the United Nations Association of the National Capital Area in recognition of her commitment to improving the status of women everywhere.

R. Wade Litchfield is vice president and general counsel for Florida Power & Light (FPL) in Palm Beach County, Florida. As a member of FPL's executive team, Mr. Litchfield has helped guide corporate strategy that transformed FPL into one of the cleanest power companies in the country, with rates among the lowest in the nation. The company's focus on advanced smart technologies has resulted in one of the strongest power grids in the country. Mr. Litchfield has served as lead counsel in many of the company's major proceedings before the Florida Public Service Commission, including base rate cases, storm cost recovery dockets and power plant construction certifications. Before joining FPL, Mr. Litchfield was senior counsel for Entergy Services Inc. in New Orleans, representing the electric and natural gas operating companies of Entergy Corp. in ratemaking, fuel cost recovery and other proceedings before state and other regulatory authorities. Mr. Litchfield is admitted to the bars of New York and Louisiana and practices in Florida as authorized house counsel. He is also a member of the Federal Energy Bar Assn. A native of Alberta, Canada, Mr. Litchfield holds a bachelor's degree (cum laude) in economics from Brigham Young University and earned his law degree (2nd in class honors) from McGill University in Montreal, Canada. He received a master's degree in business administration from the A.B. Freeman School of Business at Tulane University, and is a member of the business school honor society, Beta Gamma Sigma.

Lila Leno is the treasurer of the board of directors. Dr. Leno is a principal at Calibre CPA Group PLLC in Bethesda, Maryland. She has decades of auditing and accounting experience, including work with nonprofit organizations and government entities. She specializes in organizations that receive federal and state government funding and has performed numerous compliance audits in accordance with Government Auditing Standards, prepared 990s, and solved issues pertaining to tax exemption. Dr. Leno earned a bachelor's in accounting and finance from the University of Tirana in her home country of Albania, then continued her studies to earn a law degree and doctorate in fiscal policy. After moving to the United States, she graduated from Sonoma State University with a bachelor's in accounting. Before joining Calibre CPA Group, she served in various audit and accounting positions at Squire Lemkin, McGladry & Pullen, Goodman & Company, among other firms, as director of finance at CORE International, and as a fiscal and legal policy expert for the Albania ministry of finance. Dr. Leno is a registered CPA in the state of Maryland and a member of the Institute of Certified Public Accountants.

Carolyn Long is the secretary of the board of directors. She retired in 2013 from a career as an international development specialist. She was vice president of two organizations, including InterAction, the largest coalition of U.S. NGOs working in international development and humanitarian assistance. She has three decades of NGO-related experience with a main focus on sub-Saharan Africa, and she has worked at all levels of development from the grassroots to the global level. Her work has focused on capacity strengthening, aid effectiveness, evaluation and a range of advocacy initiatives. She was an activist in the anti-apartheid campaign for 20 years. She has written extensively on the role of civil society organizations in development. She is the author of Participation of the Poor in Development Initiatives: Taking Their Rightful Place, and several published papers on civil society advocacy initiatives. She served on the boards of Africa Action and Volunteer: The National Center on Volunteerism. Her career began as a Peace Corps volunteer in Gabon, Equatorial Africa. She speaks fluent French.

Mark Trozzi began his career in management consulting and later assumed senior financial positions in the retail industry. He entered the nonprofit world as the chief financial officer of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America and then spent several years as the chief financial officer of an internet company, Spree.com, during the late 1990s. After the internet collapse, Mr. Trozzi returned to consulting and served as the interim COO or CFO for clients like Amnesty International USA, The After-School Corporation (TASC), the national office of the YWCA and EngenderHealth, Inc. After seven months as the interim CFO of EngenderHealth, Mr. Trozzi joined the staff as vice president of operations & chief financial officer. In 2011, Mr. Trozzi retired to a life of occasional consulting and serving on nonprofit boards, finance committees and as the treasurer of several small nonprofits.

Amy Komoroski Wiwi is a partner at Lowenstein Sandler LLP in Roseland, New Jersey. Long fascinated by the complex relationships among members of the workforce, managers and their employees, Ms. Wiwi translates a passion for problem-solving into strategic counsel and effective dispute resolution. Praised by clients as very knowledgeable and objective – and praised as a superior strategist – she thrives on crafting creative solutions to the most intricate of employment problems. Ms. Wiwi counsels employers on the myriad issues they face related to hiring, disciplining and termination of employees; family and medical leaves; disability leaves and accommodations; compliance with antidiscrimination and anti-retaliation laws; and workforce reductions. She also drafts and negotiates executive employment and consulting agreements and corporate covenants. Her practice covers a wide range of litigation involving federal and state laws. Ms. Wiwi is admitted to the bar in New York and New Jersey. She earned a bachelor's of fine arts (cum laude) from the Syracuse University College of Visual and Performing Arts, and her law degree (cum laude) from Boston University. She is deeply committed to serving her local community. Ms. Wiwi sits on the Jersey Battered Women's Service board of directors, supporting its work against domestic violence by protecting and empowering victims, rehabilitating family members, advocating social reform to prevent partner violence, and educating the public.